

Chakra Energy

Dr. Motoyama developed the AMI machine. The AMI (Apparatus for Meridian Identification) works by monitoring the electrical conductivity and capacity at specific acupoints at the tip of fingers and toes (called Sei point, or Jing/Well points). After years of research, Dr. Motoyama was able to show that there is a close correlation between the electrical conductivity of meridians and the flow of Ki (or Chi) in the meridians.

The basic research Dr. Motoyama did to support his claim about the AMI can be found in his book “Measurement of Ki Energy Diagnoses & Treatment: Treatment Principle of Oriental Medicine from an Electrophysiological Viewpoints” published by Human Science Press in 1977.

AMI data tells us

- The condition of the meridians and the functioning of their corresponding internal organs – lung, large intestine, heart, small intestine, spleen, liver, stomach, urinary bladder, kidney and gall bladder;
- Whether your Ki energy is excessive or deficient;
- An objective analysis of your autonomic nervous system;
- The effects of acupuncture, meditation, and exercise through continuous monitoring of the autonomic nervous system and Ki energy;
- Which chakra is most active/inactive. The data cannot measure the amount of energy in the chakra quantitatively but can indicate which one is activated at the moment.

He also developed the chakra machine three years after completing the AMI machine. By directing energy from the subtle energy centre of the chakra the surrounding electromagnetic environment can be changed. Also the lower body has a kind of static potential which disappears when energy is discharged from the body.

He says – “In a completely dark room, insulated from physical energies from outside, a person with psychic ability can direct energy via their awakened chakra and produce light and we can detect this light and its direction. The instrument to detect this light and the changes in the electromagnetic field is called the chakra machine. This machine’s first aim was to register light or psychokinetic power and to see if it could influence an electrical atmosphere, or whether a person can produce light or not.”

His Research Institute measured many subjects, (about 100,000 over 20 years). They, investigated many psychics, martial arts masters and yogis as well as students of yoga and meditation. They have been able to detect the chakras, and to see the chakras and whether they are awakened in a person or not.

He says – “So firstly I would clearly see with my ESP ability [psychic ability] which chakra is awakened. If the chakra is awakened we can see the very bright colours of the aura and also feel much energy from this awakened chakra. Then we measured subjects with the AMI machine and have been able to determine if particular chakras are awakened, for example those who have the manipura chakra awakened have highly energised spleen, liver, stomach meridians.”

“After analysing much data obtained from many kinds of psychics or ‘normal’ people, I found, on the basis of this data and on the basis of my own super-natural understanding of such people, that we could connect the specific meridians with each chakra and link this with traditional theories about the chakras. For example, a person with an awakened manipura chakra can control the emotions, and also the functioning of the digestive system. We learnt much about each meridian and chakra from working with yogis and could link this with our AMI data.”

“Telepathy usually affects, in different ways, the different chakras. Mostly, telepathy in which companions are connected or related by their emotions or by the imagination is due to the manipura centre (solar plexus) receiving that telepathy. The person who has awakened the manipura is very sensitive, can be affected by other people very easily and finds it easy to receive information from ‘outside’. They can easily be influenced by the power of the other person and information can easily come in. However if a person has awakened the ajna chakra [the energy centre between the eyebrows] the telepathy is very different.”

“Then it is a very pure, intellectual telepathy and very clear, whereas the telepathy given through the manipura chakra is very much connected with the emotions and with a person’s own imagination. Sometimes it can be mixed with unconscious thoughts. If either the manipura or the ajna centre is awakened, it is possible to both receive telepathy or send telepathic transmission at will to others.”

“However in the case where the svadisthana chakra [the sacral centre] is awakened, all such people have some telepathic ability and can receive some information from others, but the ability is only spontaneous; they cannot control it at will and cannot send telepathic thoughts to others. So if people say they sometimes have intuition or telepathy but they cannot control it at will, that means their telepathy mostly belongs to the svadisthana chakra, and is very raw.”

“As to ki energy, if we have someone whose chakras are awakened, then with a specially designed probe we have been able to measure points on the subject’s body with a high potential which I believe corresponds to the chakras and their level of activity. My hypothesis is that the nuclei or electrons at this part of the body give off much energy and then the energy changes and discharges and comes out as the energy of the photon.”

“To verify this hypothesis, we measure photons with a photon counter. If the chakra is awakened and the potential is high then we are able to detect many photons discharged from the body from the point corresponding to the awakened chakra. We can verify the existence of the chakras and psi [psychic] energy given concentration of the mind and an awakened chakra, because more photons discharge. If we concentrate the mind and there is not an awakened chakra then nothing happens. After three seconds or 10 seconds or 20 seconds, maybe only one photon is detected. “

“That is usual but the awakened chakra gives a very unusual amount of photon discharge. Because we have concentrated at the point, this near-mental concentration of power, psychic power, gives the energy to the photon. That is how we can find this mechanism of the interaction between the mind and the body. That is a new science, or not a new science perhaps but a new medicine which is closer to other religions or philosophies. So now we are just approaching this door, to open it.”

"The new medical science will be outstandingly built upon the science of the centres, and upon their knowledge all diagnosis and possible cure will be based." Esoteric Healing, by Alice A. Bailey

"This etheric body is not only the transmitter of prana but is the medium for all the energies which we are considering.... Being of physical plane matter literally, etheric consciousness is the next step ahead for the race. This will demonstrate at first as the ability to see etherically and to cognize etheric matter. It is the field of exploration immediately ahead of the modern scientist. In ten years' time, many medical practitioners will be recognizing it as a fact of nature.

"Most of the diseases that the physical body suffers from at present have their roots in the etheric body. There are few, if any, purely physical diseases. Disease has its source in astral and etheric conditions." (A Treatise on White Magic, p. 372 by Alice A. Bailey, Lucis Trust).
